Physical therapist uses skills to support humanitarian efforts
The Commanders Action Line is an open-door program for Team Robins personnel to give kudos, ask questions or suggest ways to make Robins a better place to live, learn, work and play. The most efficient and effective way to resolve a problem or complaint is to directly contact the responsible organization.

That gives the organization a chance to help you, as well as a chance to improve its processes. If you do contact the Commanders Action Line, please fully explain whom it is you want to recognize and why, what you have a question about, or your suggestion. Discourteous or disrespectful submissions will not be processed. Commander’s Action Line items of general interest to the Robins community will be printed in the Robins Rev-Up.

A Team Robins physical therapist, was one of 50 U.S. team members who recently spent more than two weeks in Tam Ky, Quang Nam Province, Vietnam, seeing patients and building relationships with local physicians during the humanitarian assistance engagement Operation Pacific Angel Vietnam 2017.

“Each day we bused out to a government community center where we provided family health, pediatric care, and physical therapy assistance and dental care,” Maj. (Dr.) Cody Butler, 78th Medical Group Clinical Medicine Flight commander, said. “We would start seeing patients at about 7:30 in the morning and ran all day long.”

His efforts were part of Operation Pacific Angel Vietnam 2017 – the last of four humanitarian assistance engagements that made up PACANGEL 17.

The program – which has been going on for a decade now – ensures that the militaries of various countries in the Pacific region are able to work together should a humanitarian assistance need arise. One of Team Robins’ own physicians was given the opportunity to take part in the program, which is typically only attended by members of Pacific Command.

“I saw between 50 and 100 patients a day,” he said. “To put that in perspective, I see about 10 to 15 a day while working at Robins.”

The overall goal of PACANGEL was to try and build international relationships with the people of Vietnam. In addition to medical care, the team was able to go on a few evening excursions and experience the country outside of the treatment areas.

“It was interesting to see things like memorials and Viet Cong tunnels from their standpoint, where everything was ‘The war against the Americans.’ So it was interesting seeing this communist country with statues and pictures of their leader Ho Chi Minh everywhere as we’re trying to break the ice with these people.”

Another interesting experience for Dr. Butler was being able to interact with some of the local Vietnamese physicians.

“In Vietnam, physical therapy is not well utilized – people can’t afford it,” he said. “So, being able to teach these physicians some techniques and tricks of my trade, and then seeing them try it on patients, it was really neat to see them now have another option of care to provide to their patients.”

PACANGEL 17 conducted humanitarian assistance engagements in Bogo City and San Remigio, Northern Cebu Province, Philippines; Northern and Western Divisions, Fiji; and Gorkha, Nepal.

Butler said that by participating in humanitarian missions such as this, the Air Force is able to reinforce its capabilities to deliver assistance to areas that need it.

“You typically think of the pilots or launching satellites as making the difference,” he said. “But even us medics, we’re there to soften the hearts of the people and provide a service that only we could offer.”

“I saw between 50 and 100 patients a day … To put that in perspective, I see about 10 to 15 a day while working at Robins.”

Stay Safe for the holidays

Many are already decking their halls in anticipation for a merry Christmas. Here are a few things to keep in mind to keep your holiday safe.

Water your natural Christmas tree daily. A dry tree is an unsafe one.

Keep your Christmas tree away from heat sources.

Be careful with holiday decorations. Choose decorations that are flame resistant or flame retardant.

Some lights are only for indoor or outdoor use, but not both.

Replace any string of lights with worn or broken cords or loose bulb connections. Read manufacturer’s instructions for number of light strands to connect.

Use clips, not nails, to hang lights so the cords do not get damaged.

Keep decorations away from windows and doors.

Turn off all light strings and decorations before leaving home or going to bed.

Keep children and pets away from lit candles.

Test your smoke alarms and tell guests about your home fire escape plan.
It’s that time again ... FLU SHOTS

Staff Sgt. Tam Nguyen, 78th Medical Group Immunization Clinic noncommissioned officer in charge, and Technical Sgt. Sean Striggles, 78th MDG flight chief, administer flu shots to Col. Lyle Drew, 78th Air Base Wing commander, top, and Chief Master Sergeant Emilio Hernandez, 78th ABW command chief. The Influenza vaccine is here and available for all TRICARE beneficiaries. The goal is to have 90 percent of the active duty and Reserve population vaccinated by Dec. 15. Group commanders and first sergeants will coordinate with the immunization clinic to schedule a point of distribution to administer the vaccine within their groups. There is no need to schedule an appointment, walk-ins are accepted in the immunization clinic, Mondays through Fridays from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. (U.S. Air Force photos/RAYMOND CRAYTON, JR.)
Caring for an ill, injured, or disabled loved one can be both rewarding and exhausting. For family caregivers who are already juggling many priorities, it can take a lot out of you. Sometimes you may be left feeling rundown or sick. WorkLife4You can help you take care of yourself as you care for others. Here are five tips for avoiding burnout:

Learn about the condition or illness affecting the person you care for. Learn as much as possible about the condition and how it could change over time. This can help you be better prepared.

- Having an idea of what to expect can lower your stress level.
- It will help you plan for future medical needs. It might also give you time to learn skills you will need later.
- Some health problems may cause your loved one to act out, say harmful things, or not even remember who they are. Staying educated about the illness can help you understand when this is a symptom and not act negatively toward it. Remember, sometimes your loved one is not sure how to deal with it either.

Do not be afraid to ask for help. Think positively about the hard work you do, but remember that it is OK to ask for help.

- Make a list of tasks you would like help with and people you can call.
- Ask a trusted neighbor to pick up some items for you from the store.
- Ask family members to assist with household chores, paperwork, or research. You might be surprised at how willing they are to help.
- Contact your local area agencies or volunteer groups for assistance. Many groups offer meal delivery, transportation, and respite care. WorkLife4You specialists can connect you to these services and other resources.

Take breaks. Find some time each day when you can safely step away — for example, when you have respite care or a trusted friend or family member visiting. During your break you can:

- Go outside for a walk.
- Go for a bike ride.
- Read a book.
- Listen to music.
- Chat with a friend.
- Schedule weekly or monthly respite care to give yourself breaks.
- Even if you only have a few free minutes, give yourself a much-needed breather.

Take care of your health, too! To give the best care possible, you need to stay in good health. Your overall wellness is essential to your ability to keep providing for those you care for.

- Eat healthy meals and snacks.
- Engage in daily physical activity. It can help lower stress, increase your energy, and help keep your heart healthy.
- Get regular health and dental checkups, and any health screenings you may need annually.
- Make sure you get your annual flu shot and other appropriate immunizations.
- Try to maintain regular sleeping patterns as much as possible.
- Connect with other caregivers who may be going through the same thing. Your mental health is important too.

Stay positive! Be realistic about what you can and cannot do. This can help you keep a positive attitude, which can lighten the duties of caregiving.

Even if the person you care for is not able to show happiness or appreciation, you can feel good about the care you are giving and the love he or she is receiving. You may not be able to make the person you care for better, but you can protect his or her dignity and do your best to help them feel safe and loved. There are many things you cannot control, but you can control your actions. Learn to recognize the things you cannot control, and do not lose time worrying about how you cannot change them.

Being a family caregiver can be challenging; there is no doubt about it. You are there to support your loved one, and we are here to support you. Call WorkLife4You today for expert guidance and resources that can help you take care of yourself.

Friends and family often wrestle with feelings of regret when losing a loved one to suicide. Most are left wondering what they could’ve done to prevent the situation.

Robins’ Clinical Psychologist and Installation Suicide Prevention Program Manager, Capt. John Terry, said while suicide has a low base rate of occurrence and there are insufficient data to accurately predict those most at risk for suicide, there are things people can do to help.

“Suicides are caused by multiple factors and are rarely explained by a single event,” he said. “Several co-occurring factors including relationship or marital problems, financial, legal or disciplinary problems and mental health issues are risk factors for suicide. Preventing the accumulation of risk factors by engaging in Comprehensive Airmen Fitness is the best strategy to prevent risk for suicide. CAF consists of ensuring engagement in and balance between physical, social, spiritual and emotional resiliency.”

Terry said promoting CAF and ensuring a culture of Wingmanship are the best strategies to prevent suicide.

“Wingmanship increases awareness of risk factors that a fellow Wingman may experience and allows for action to be taken to ensure the individual seeks help,” he said. “The acronym ACE (Ask, Care, Escort) communicates the steps to ask if someone is having thoughts of suicide, demonstrate caring by listening to their concerns, and escorting them to an appropriate helping agency or supervisor.”

While there is no correlation between time of year and suicide, periods of transition or disruptions in social support networks can be times of concern, Terry said.

A new Bird Cannon System is up and running at Robins Air Force Base. One of the cannons – which is part of a system of non-lethal, sound-producing cannons – sits at one end of the Robins runway as a base aircraft takes off in the background. The cannon is one of 24 devices located around the Robins airfield in an effort to minimize loss of Air Force resources and personnel from potentially hazardous wildlife populations around the runway.
