Trick or Treat!

Halloween will be observed at Robins tomorrow with trick-or-treating from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Participating base residents should leave exterior lights on; those who do not wish to participate should turn off exterior lights.

Security Forces and volunteers will help ensure safety in the housing areas with their annual Pumpkin Patrol.

The 78th Force Support Squadron is also planning two other events Saturday – a Scary Movie Night at the Youth Center from 7 to 10 p.m. and a Thunder Alley Halloween Party at the Bowling Alley from 9 to 11 p.m.

Face painting and a balloon giveaway for children ages 1 to 12 is scheduled from 4 to 6 p.m. at the Base Exchange. It will be followed at 5 p.m. by a costume contest. Winners of the contest will receive gift cards.

“Trick or Trunk” in the BX parking lot will start at 6 p.m. People are asked to decorate their vehicles and park in a closed-off area, where trick-or-treating will be done at the cars.

Early flu shots key to prevention

BY DONNA MILES
American Forces Press Service

With flu season already under way, the top TRICARE military health plan official encourages the system’s almost 9.7 million beneficiaries to get their flu shots as early as possible at a military medical facility, network provider, or at any participating pharmacy.

Military hospitals and clinics, and TRICARE network providers are stocked with this year’s flu vaccine and ready to administer them now, said Navy Rear Adm. Christine Hunter, deputy director for the Tricare Management Activity. It’s available to every TRI-

AT ROBINS

Flu vaccines are currently available on a first come, first served basis for all active-duty personnel, dependents, and retirees. Clinic hours are 7 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. weekdays (with no afternoon hours on Thursday). For more information, call Immunizations at 327-7919.

CARE beneficiary more than 6 months old, with no copayment or preauthorization required, even for people enrolled in programs which typically require one, she said.

“We want you to get the shot,” Hunter emphasized, calling flu shots “an essential preventive service.” Nine out of 10 healthy people who get the shot won’t get the flu, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Unlike last year, when people needed two vaccines — a conventional flu shot and another developed specifically for the H1N1 virus — one shot will suffice this year, Hunter noted. Its formulation covers two of the most common seasonal influenza strains,

EJECTION SYSTEM F-15 Egress Shop ensures pilots land safely

BY WAYNE CRENSHAW
wayne.crenshaw.ctr@robins.af.mil

Before an F-15 Eagle flies following programmed depot maintenance here, every component is exhaustively tested except for one – the ejection system.

If it was tested, it would have to be rebuilt again, so testing it is simply not practical.

Pilots just have to put their faith in the seven people who work in the F-15 Egress Shop.

“They have to have a tremendous amount of integrity,” said George Reid, F-15 flight chief. “I can’t emphasize enough how important it is, how each and every one of these guys have to really pay attention to what they are doing. You can’t have an off day here.”

Appeals court issues stay on ‘Don’t Ask’ order

BY DONNA MILES
AND JIM GARAMONE
American Forces Press Service

The Defense Department supports the Oct. 21 federal appeals court decision to temporarily block a judge’s order which put an immediate end to the so-called “Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell” law which bans gay men and lesbians from serving openly in the military.

“For the reasons stated in the government’s submission, we believe a stay is appropriate,” said Pentagon spokeswoman Cynthia Smith of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals decision.

The three-judge panel issued a statement Oct. 20 which noted it allowed the “Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell” law to stand to provide more time to study the issues involved in its possible repeal. Both sides had until Monday to submit legal documents for consideration.

The higher-court decision temporarily suspends U.S. District Judge Virginia Phillips’ Oct. 12 ruling that the law is unconstitutional. Phillips issued an injunction requiring the department “immediately to suspend and discontinue any investigation, or discharge, separation or other proceeding that may have commenced under the ‘Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell’ act or its implementing regulations.”

In its appeal, Justice Department officials asked the law be reinstated, at least until a study of the impact of repealing it is completed.

Defense Department officials want a deliberative, long-range look at any changes in the law, said Pentagon spokesman Marine Corps Col. David Lapan.

Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates set up a working group to examine the ramifications of a possible repeal of the law. The group is scheduled to submit its report Dec. 1.

Base becoming darker place

BY ED SALEEM
Air Force Reserve Command

Last week one of my workmates told me he thought we must be doing a good job because “the base is now a darker place.”

It sounded like something someone would say to a vampire, after he installed curtains on windows to block out sunlight, or maybe a writer like Stephen King for bringing a bit of his macabre to a location.

But I took it as a compliment. What he was saying was as he drove around the base at night, he noticed lights are off where they are supposed to be off. Further, in the morning, security, street, and airfield lighting are off.

This is the result of a lot of work and planning from a lot of teams, including maintenance squads who have fixed what needed to be fixed, and are getting and keeping automated systems working as they should.

It’s also a result of employees throughout Robins. But it doesn’t stop there.

The base has more energy-saving projects in the works, from more automation of buildings for better heating, cooling, and lighting control, to comprehensive energy surveys to identify other areas needing improvement.

Can you guess or do you know what retro-commissioning means? The end result will be a more energy-efficient Robins.

However, the base still needs your eyes, your ears, and your ideas to make energy conservation work. Lights are still being left on that could be turned off for greater energy savings.

With your support, Robins will continue to be a “darker place.”

Public confident in military

BY CHERYL PELLERIN
American Forces Press Service

Americans have more confidence in the military than they have in banks, the media, public schools and organized religion, according to a recent national poll.

More than 1,000 adults answered questions about their confidence in 18 U.S. institutions — including the military — for the Associated Press-National Constitution Center poll, conducted in August by market-research firm GfK Roper Public Affairs and Corporate Communications.

In the poll, respondents had more confidence in the U.S. military than in Congress; state, federal and local governments; the Supreme Court; and print, broadcast and online news media.

On the question of measuring confidence in the military, 13 percent of respondents were “extremely confident,” 30 percent were “very confident,” and 43 percent were “somewhat confident.” Only 13 percent were “not too confident” or “not confident at all,” and 1 percent “didn’t know.”

This poll agrees with the results of two recent annual polls — from Gallup in Washington and Harris Interactive in New York — which also show high levels of confidence in the U.S. military.

In the July Gallup survey, 76 percent of people queried said they had a “great deal” or “quite a lot” of confidence in the military.

The February Harris poll showed 59 percent had a “great deal of confidence” in the “people in charge of running” the military.

AF starts migration of information, services to new total-force website

BY STAFF SGT.
STEVE GREVER

DCS, Manpower, Personnel and Services

Air Force personnel specialists are in the process of migrating personnel information and services to the new Air Force Personnel Services website.

The transfer aims to move the Air Force toward its goal of establishing a single, online knowledge base for active duty, Air National Guard, Air Force Reserve, civilian members, and retirees.

"The Air Force is transforming the delivery of personnel information and services for total force Airmen through responsive, effective and modernized processes and capabilities," said Chief of the Air Force Manpower and Personnel Program Integration Office Col. Steven Talley. "The new website incorporates total force personnel information — what we call knowledge — and makes it available to all Airmen, online."

Each Air Force component did its part in the overall planning, coordination and execution phases of migrating more than 3,400 total force knowledge articles to the personnel services website, said Tom Oates, AFPC's knowledge management branch chief for the active-duty component.

"We reconfigured the website to have the capability to serve all total-force Airmen and retirees," Oates said. "The website reconfiguration plan included modifying our existing drop-down menus, specific customer segment menus, and categories for knowledge articles to accommodate total-force component content."

The new knowledge base is designed to offer "one-stop-shopping" for personnel information and services for customers. Knowledge articles from all components continue to be phased into the new website as they are updated and approved by component representatives, offering the most current and applicable information for customers, according to Senior Master Sgt. George Macaluso, Air Force Reserve knowledge management operations superintendent.

"While we want Reserve and Guard members to visit the AFPERS website, they can still find information on the ARPC and AFRC websites until the migration is completed in 2011," Macaluso said.

The consolidation of personnel information will ensure total force Airmen have only one official source to receive personnel-related content.

Currently, there are numerous online resources for personnel information, and the content is not standardized for customers, said Thomas Pague, Air National Guard Personnel Services Delivery Transformation documentation management chief.

"We worked together to make the collaboration happen for all rather than focus on one component," Pague said.

This knowledge content migration is part of a larger Air Force Personnel Services Delivery Transformation initiative to integrate all active duty, Guard, Reserve, civilian and retiree personnel information and services into one of many total-force solutions.

Union steward gives thumbs up to 560th AMXS open-door policy

BY WAYNE CRENSHAW
wayne.crenshaw.ctr@robins.af.mil

Brian Smith really likes his job as a union steward. That hasn't always been the case.

When he first started, relations between employees and management here were strained and he stayed busy dealing with issues.

Nowadays, an open-door relationship with management in the C-130 area where he works makes his job much easier.

"I'll tell anyone right now is the best time ever to be a union steward in the C-130 area," he said.

Smith, an aircraft mechanic, has been a union steward for three years in the 560th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron. He is the union steward in the C Flight, where he works, as well as the directorate steward over the entire squadron of 1,300 people.

He credits much of the improvement of labor and management relationships in the unit to Mark Johnson, the squadron director.

"He has an open-door policy," Smith said. "Instead of having to wait to talk to him, I can pretty much walk in and have a conversation about something that's real important, and try to get it settled that day. Before, we didn't have that."

Smith was recognized for his efforts to improve employee/management relationships with the Foster Leadership in People award. He was nominated for the award by Johnson.

Michelle Smith, no relation, works with Smith on many issues in the C-Flight, where she is human resources supervisor.

"One of the things I like so much about Brian, is that when I have an issue, or something I think might be an issue, I have the ability to call and discuss it with him, to make sure we are doing things right," she said. "He's real easy to work with that way. It's easier to work out issues when you have a good union-management relationship."

Native American Heritage Observance Month

Robins' annual celebration of Native American Heritage Observance Month begins next week. This year's theme is "Life is Sacred – Celebrate Healthy Native Communities."

The celebration kicks off Wednesday with a free corn roast, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the courtyard between Bldgs. 300 and 301.

Stephen Hammack, base archaeologist, will be on hand to identify artifacts people may have. In addition, a primitive skills demonstration will be given by Scott Jones of Athens, Ga., a noted archaeologist and primitive lifestyles expert.

Robins volunteers will be reaching out to the community with book readings to children at the Warner Robins Library Wednesday at 4 p.m., the Base Library

Nov. 15 at 10 a.m., and the Perry Library Nov. 18 at 11 a.m. Robins employees will also be reading to pre-K and second grade students Nov. 18 at 15 elementary schools. Hammack will give archaeological presentations to students at Huntington Middle School Nov. 5 and Veterans High School Nov. 18.

On Nov. 23, there will be a luncheon at the Heritage Club from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Tickets are $13 and can be purchased from unit NAHO representatives.

For more information on NAHO activities, call Linda Fountain at 926-6001.

ARE YOU COMMITTED?

For 69 days, the world watched to see if 33 miners trapped in a mine in Chile would be alive. It seems like there have been a multitude of disasters lately, but this one was different.

As the drama unfolded, our attention was focused not only on the rescue operations but the miners themselves.

What made these men they would survive the ordeal? What kept them alive and in relatively good health and spirits are things which contribute to success—teamwork, planning and organization. But, what really got these men through—and what really matters whether you are trapped in a mine, on a sports team or at work—is commitment. Commitment is believing success is going to happen, or you will achieve your goals, whatever they may be. Of course, planning and teamwork play a role. However, if members of any team don't believe in the desired outcome, they will not commit themselves to the goal. They will only go through the motions, and then shrug and say, “Oh, well. I tried.” Commitment is called by other names: confidence, hope, faith, the will to win.

Commitment is called by other names: confidence, hope, faith, the will to win ... But, it is the belief your goal is not only possible but obtainable.

Whatever it's called, it is the follow through. People fail, but those who are successful basically just try again and again, until they achieve what they started. The miners had commitment — they believed they would be rescued. The team working on the surface had commitment — they believed they would rescue the miners.

It was the commitment which kept the operation going. Indeed, even in the most desperate situations, commitment is the most crucial element of success.

I took the family to the Safe House, where the staff began to immediately care for and get them as comfortable as possible.

This is just one of many abused spouses/partners I have knowledge of in Middle Georgia. The stories don't get prettier, and the struggle to provide them safety doesn't get easier, but the Salvation Army continues to per-

The Safe House assists abused spouses/partners in securing protective orders, looking for work, learning how to manage their finances, and starting over (in a new home and, sometimes, even in a new state). Unfortunately, the facility is almost always at full capacity.

I don't have much, but I always give what I can to help abused women and men (yes, men can also be victims of abuse), as well as their children and the Safe House.

I encourage you to do the same. You just never know if one day the person in need of help may be your son, daughter, or even you.

There will be a free pancake flip Nov. 10 from 5 to 7:30 p.m. at Robins Park.

This event is sponsored by the Robins Chapel and Airmen's Ministry for all Team Robins personnel and family members.

Col. Carl Buhler, 78th Air Base Wing commander, said the pancake flip is a 50-year tradition of the U.S. Air Force Air Demonstration Squadron "Thunderbirds." He served with the unit as maintenance officer and decided to bring the event to the Robins community.

The annual Team Robins Angel Tree Christmas Drive kicks off Thursday. The program solicits aid from the base community to ensure all children with ties to Robins will have plenty of presents to open on Christmas Day.

The Angel Trees and collection boxes will be located at the Commissary and Base Exchange.

Donations will be taken through Dec. 12 to ensure timely delivery. Gift cards and monetary donations are also being accepted.

Checks should be made out to the Team Robins First Sergeant's Council. For late donations, contact Master Sgt. Jerry Sutton at 497-5127 or Master Sgt. Robert Wolfe at 926-8142.

The Airman Ministry Center is holding a donation drive for the Airman's Attic. The AMC will be collecting items through Nov. 6 from member's houses. Items can also be dropped off at the Airman's Attic.

Any donation, no matter how big or small, is greatly appreciated. For more information, call Airman 1st Class Brandon Womble at 327-4269.

PDM approximately every six years, and the Egress Shop's job is to remove and completely refurbish the ejection system.

The system is a marvel of engineering called an Advanced Complex Ejection Seat, or ACES II. The system is designed to set off a complex sequence of events in a split second, and must work 100 percent of the time.

Its components include a rocket motor, a sensor to gauge the plane's altitude and speed at the time of the ejection, a gyro to stabilize the seat during ejection, and two parachutes.

The pilot and seat separate after ejection. One parachute is to save the pilot while the other is to slow the seat's fall.

Reid said no ejection seat has ever failed to operate as a result of work done at Robins. The last time a seat refurbished here had to be used was in 2007 when an F-15 broke apart in mid-air. The pilot safely ejected.

Phil Welch, the work leader in the shop, said if a seat failed to work and it was determined to be the result of a mistake by his team, they would be in serious trouble. But, that's not what motivates them to do it right.

"What it's about is saving a pilot's life. That's what we think about," he said.

A H3N2 and B virus, as well as H1N1.

Although the flu typically doesn't hit some regions for another few months, research shows it's better to get the vaccine early, preferably by mid-October.

Last year, for example, when manufacturing shortages delayed flu shots for TRICARE beneficiaries along with the general population, 486,000 TRICARE beneficiaries who hadn't been immunized developed flu symptoms before Nov. 1.

"We went back and looked at our data and realized if we had been able to get everyone immunized in October, rather than later in the year, we would have prevented almost 500,000 people from getting sick," Hunter said.

Not all required a doctor's care, and most didn't experience any serious complications, she said, but almost all could have avoided the flu if the vaccine had been available

WHAT TO KNOW

In addition to getting a flu shot, CDC officials offer additional tips for avoiding the flu:

- ▶ Cover your nose and mouth with a tissue when you cough or sneeze. Throw the tissue away after you use it.
- ▶ Wash your hands often with soap and water, or an alcohol-based hand cleanser especially after you cough or sneeze.
- ▶ Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth. Germs spread this way.
- ▶ Try to avoid close contact with sick people.
- ▶ Stay home if you are sick until at least 24 hours after you no longer have a fever — 100 degrees Fahrenheit or 37.8 degrees Celsius — or signs of a fever without the use of a fever-reducing medicine such as acetaminophen.
- ▶ While sick, limit contact with others as much as possible to keep from infecting them.

"This year, there is no delay in the distribution of the shots," Hunter said. "You can get it now. It's available in military hospitals and clinics and through TRICARE now. So we would like to encourage people to get it now."

To make it as convenient as possible, TRICARE has entered into agreements with about 50,000 retail pharmacies nationwide. Like military hospitals and clinics and other TRICARE network providers, they will administer the flu shot at no cost to TRICARE beneficiaries.

Many of the retail pharmacies offer flu shots at night and on weekends, and most don't require appointments.

TRICARE introduced the pharmacy option during last year's flu season, and Hunter said she hopes more people will take advantage of it this year as they learn about the program.

"People really value convenience," she said.

"This is part of a campaign to bring preventive care as close to where people live and work as possible."

The TRICARE website (www.tricare.mil) lists participating pharmacies, with a locator button identifying the closest one, based on the beneficiary's ZIP code.

While encouraging people to get their flu shot wherever it's most convenient, Hunter emphasized some TRICARE beneficiaries should consult their medical provider first. These include people with a serious chronic illness, young children who have never had a flu shot, and other at-risk groups.

Retail pharmacies will administer flu shots to active-duty military members and can provide documentation for their official shot records.

However, Hunter recognized some service-members may be required to get their shots along with the rest of the members of their units. That way, she explained, the information is immediately recorded in unit shot records, with no delay.

"The review that is going on would look at all the far-ranging impacts of what changing the law would mean," Lapan said.

A long-range plan for changing the law would include a period of transition to conduct training to ensure everyone is informed about new policies and procedures, he said.

In response to Phillips' ruling, Pentagon officials instructed recruiters to begin processing paperwork for openly gay men or lesbians to apply to serve in the military. But citing uncertainty over final disposition of the matter in the courts and on Capitol Hill, Smith warned at the time that potential applicants needed to be aware the situation could change, as it has with the Oct. 20 appellate court decision.

WHEN NOT IN USE, KILL THE JUICE

Save energy by taking a few easy actions before you leave each day ▶ Switch or turn off all energy vampires (chargers, coffee pots, computer speakers, etc.) The best way to do this is use a power strip and switch the strip off.

▶ Turn off overhead and task lights

▶ Turn off monitors (Leave your computer on for updates.)

▶ Turn off desktop and network printers

▶ Turn off copiers, fax machines, data senders, etc.

Local champ wrestles way to second-place finish

BY WAYNE CRENSHAW

wayne.crenshaw.ctr@robins.af.mil

About six years ago one of Doug Erlich's co-workers challenged him to an arm-wrestling match. Erlich won and soon found himself with a parade of challengers.

He vanquished every one until Oct. 9, when Erlich, an electrician in the 560th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, traveled to Dalton for his first professional arm-wrestling tournament. He won his weight class to qualify for the overall championship round, where he lost in the final title match.

He wasn't terribly disappointed considering it was his first organized event.

"I told everybody at work I just wanted to win one match to save face," he said. "I went up there and did a lot better than I thought."

He entered the open round with two significant disadvantages. His opponent was a veteran who didn't have to qualify as Erlich had done. So by that match, Erlich was competing in his 15th match while his opponent was in his sixth match.

Erlich also hurt his arm in the final match of the weight-class round.

Erlich now has his sights on Florida's annual state tournament.

He would like to eventually make it to a big-time tournament, like 26-time world champion Ron Bath, who he met while he was competing in Dalton.

"I want to go as far as I can go," he said. "I'm going to push myself until my arm breaks."

POLITICS

Avoid violating the Hatch Act

The Hatch Act prohibits Federal employees from engaging in political activity while on duty or when using government resources, including the base e-mail system. Two recent cases have shown just how costly violating the Hatch Act can be.

Pattie Ware was a program analyst and contractor officer's technical representative with the Treasury Department's Bureau of Printing and Engraving with 38 years of service.

In September 2008, she sent several e-mails from her government computer seeking support and political contributions for one of the candidates in the Presidential election.

Among the recipients of the e-mails were several employees of the staffing contractor for which she was the COTR.

After the Office of Special Counsel, the agency which enforces the Hatch Act, filed a complaint against her with the Merit Systems Protection Board, she agreed these events happened and the Bureau had been sending out training materials on the Hatch Act, including the misuse of e-mail systems.

The MSPB found she had knowingly solicited political contributions, took part in political activity while on duty, in a government office and using government resources, and used her official authority or influence to interfere with or affect the result of the election, all of which violated the Hatch Act.

The MSPB found her multiple violations to be serious, especially when some of the recipients were employees of the contractor over whom she had influence. The Board said forwarding e-mails is little different from handing out campaign literature.

The Board did not accept her arguments she didn't realize what she was doing. While she had claimed no lawyer had told her what would violate the Hatch Act, the Bureau's training efforts, which included advice from the Bureau's lawyers, prevented her from reasonably claiming her violations were unknowing and unintentional.

The MSPB determined her long service record with no evidence of performance problems or disciplinary actions was not sufficient to reduce the presumed penalty for Hatch Act violations—removal from employment, and she was removed from her position within 30 days.

Phillip Mark is a Revenue Agent with the IRS. In January 2008, he forwarded an e-mail to various persons, including co-workers, which solicited contributions and support for a Presidential candidate in that year's election.

He sent the message from his office while on duty and included his name, title, duty location, and telephone number.

The MSPB found he violated the Hatch Act by using his official authority or influence to interfere with or affect an election, soliciting a contribution from anyone, and by engaging in political activity while on duty.

The MSPB ordered the IRS to suspend Mark without pay for 120 days.

How to avoid violating the Hatch Act:

1. Don't send e-mails using the government e-mail system which support or oppose a political candidate or party. If someone sends one to your government e-mail address, don't forward it, except to leadership or to our office to have it investigated for a potential Hatch Act violation.

2. Don't solicit political contributions on- or off-duty. While it is permissible to send a political e-mail from home using your personal e-mail address, those e-mails still must not seek contributions for a candidate or party.

The prohibitions of the Hatch Act are enforced, even against employees with very lengthy service. The penalty can be removal or a long-term suspension.

If you have questions about the Hatch Act, you can contact the Legal Office at 222-0571 or the Office of Special Counsel at 1-800-85-HATCH.
