Employment Office closure

The Robins Employment Office will close this Friday for the last time May 29. The office has been located near the Museum of Aviation since 1985. The closure allows personnel offices to concentrate on operations and improve employee efficiency. Personnel currently working at the office will be transferring to various new offices on base. This is an opportunity for us to reorganize and improve our personnel processes. It will have minimal impact on personnel and will be a benefit to our overall processes," said Deb Singleton, director of personnel. Customers seeking employment information should use the USA jobs website at www.usajobs.gov or pick up a reference guide, which will be available in a discreet case in front of the building. Copies of the guide can also be obtained from the Robins Visitors Center, the Department of Labor, the Warner Robins Public Library or by visiting www.robinsoffice.com.

Community Assessment Survey runs until May 30

The community assessment survey is now live. When you visit www.robinsoffice.com, you will be greeted with a survey asking you to take a few minutes to answer questions for the Community Assessment Survey. You will be asked a few questions about your experiences with the base and your overall quality of life. "It's a very short survey, it will ask you to click on a ‘com’ well worth your time," said Community Assessment Director, Col. Fred Strong. There have been some concerns from the community about the "c Comet" address, but it is the proper address and it is secure. Team Robins members who are asked to participate are encouraged to do so.

The assessment is designed to assist chaplains and people working in installation level Airman and family readiness centers, family advocacy programs, health and wellness centers, mental health clinics, and child and youth programs to better meet the needs of service members and their families.

Gate closures, times target safety

The 78th Civil Engineer Group closed the Russell Parkway gate Tuesday for better maintenance. On a rotating schedule, one of the main gates will be closed the first three Tuesdays of each month between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. In the best interests of all Team Robins members and the safety of our base maintenance crew, the 78th CEG will close the gates after morning rush hour and before afternoon rush hour; Scott Hastings, 78th Civil Engineer Squadron director, said. The schedule will be the same each month until further notice. Additional signage will be placed at each gate the week before closure. Gate Closures Schedule
First Monday of each month – Russell Parkway Gate closed 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.
Second Tuesday of the month – Watson Boulevard Gate closed 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.
Third Tuesday of the month – Green Street Gate closed 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.
In case of inclement weather, work is planned on Wednesdays, as weather permits. For more information, call Scott Hastings at 497-5425 or Lorrie Simmons at 497-3977.

AF Reserve Band celebrates years of memories

BY JENNY GORDON

The band of the U.S. Air Force Reserve celebrates its 45th anniversary this year. The band, with its doors to its practice facility one last time, its members will take away memories that will last more than just a lifetime. A tribute last week celebrated those memories, just a few weeks after for some members who are getting ready to leave Robins for other assignments across the globe. Senior Master Sgt. William Granger, band superintendent and First Sergeant, will be one of the last to leave when the band officially inactivates Sept. 30. He will then head to his next base in California, as superintendent of the Air Force Reserve Band of the Golden West at Travis Air Force Base.

“Leaving behind eighties of friendships will be the hardest thing to deal with," said Granger of his time stationed with the band in Middle Georgia. "Those will be hard to let go of, but of course we will all stay in touch. "Neither else have we had such a wonderful mission to go where the men and women are around the world," he continued. “It's been a real privilege to share this time with them." As the band’s 45 members prepare to leave this summer, catching a glimpse of a few last-minute performances will be hard to come by. A local show was held during the Christmas holidays, and just this week the band took time to play for students and staff at Shirley Hills Elementary School as part of Month of the Military Child celebrations. Since 1945 the band has performed for millions of military members and guests all over the world.

Not only doctors save lives – we do too. If an aircraft part is not crafted accurately to specifications or tested to verify it does what it’s supposed to, the potential for an accident is very real. Testing to ensure that never happens is part of the lab capabilities performed in the Material and Engineering Test Flight here.

“We have a lot of capability to perform a wide range of metals testing, failure analysis and more," said Justin Potts, First Article Test Section chief and mechanical engineer. “That’s a large part of the lab functions performed in the test flight. Take, for example the failure analysis lab’s scanning electron microscope used to examine a part’s surface that has been fractured. Upon further examination, it can determine what materials exist on the fracture surface. Along with optical microscopy and Energy Dispersive X-Ray Analysis, the lab can determine how and why that particular part failed while in service. “No two failures are the same," said Mike Bratcher, materials engineer. “Sometimes it happens in therapy, sometimes it happens in flight. “Any time they happen in service, they come to our laboratory. We see a wide variety from all the systems in the Air Force.”

AFSC commander: Proud of what we do

`From the Robins Rev-Up, May 10, 2013`

Team AFSC.

We’re more than half way through the fiscal year, and we’re performing better than anyone expected.

The Air Force Sustainment Center is meeting mission requirements in a cost-effective manner with high quality and improved safety.

Here’s how we know: We have the data to prove it. We still have a long way to go before we truly fill the gap of the past five years. We’ve had a 21 percent increase in aircraft production while decreasing our costs—taking a small step to becoming cost-effective.

Our MICAP (mission capable status) rates are at an all-time low, and we have the momentum to make things even better for our warfighter.

We’re improving our processing and working to create an environment for success.

Success begins in the work center—making sure our employees have the tools, training and access to resources they need to get the job done. Success also depends on each and every AFSC member looking for ways to improve so we can complete the mission.

I know times are tough, and everyone is concerned about the uncertainty of our future. But I think we’ve proven to the Air Force that AFSC is a vital component to our ability to defend our country and fight and win…today and tomorrow.

Thank you all for all you’ve done during this transition. I know it hasn’t been easy. As soon as we know more about the forthcoming situation, we’ll send you an update. Until then, I simply want to say, “I’m proud of what you are doing to get the right results, the right way.”

New process to save time for customers

The 78th Air Base Wing Communications Directorate has implemented a new program to standardize how customers submit requests for new communications and Information Technology services at Robins.

The new service request process allows SC to better meet mission partners’ needs. Working through LEAN initiatives, SC is streamlining service flows to improve the time it takes to fulfill customer requests.

“The LEAN process will take time,” Celeste Ricks, Plans and Programs Branch chief, and said “SC is streamlining service flows to improve the time it takes for customers to receive new services.”

Requests for service were previously performed by the unit’s Telephone Control Officer.

The Unit Communications and Information System Officer program has replaced the former TCO program.

Under the program, units now appoint communications and information systems officers to perform the functions formerly covered under the TCO program, as well as covering other communications and information systems duties.

The UCISO will be the single, accountable focal point for their respective unit’s communications and information systems service requests.

Responsibilities will include validating, submitting and obtaining funding for their organization’s service requests. The UCISOs are the unit’s point of contact for requesting new services such as hardware and software acquisition, voice, data, service upgrades and one-of-a-kind CI service design and installation.

Unit CISOs submit CI service requests to SC through the IT Service Management tool.

The new program is maintained by the 78th SC XP Service Request Management Office.

“The SRMO office is our Mission Partner’s one-stop-shop for non-standard work requests,” said Ricks. “Our talented team of service managers lead by Erika Johnson, works one-on-one with the UCISO to fulfill unique service requests.”

The SRMO also provides training and guidance to all UCISOs, including assistance with the ITSM tool.

The UCISO program now gives leadership the opportunity to validate and approve their unit’s service requests. The Commm Directorate can now prioritize service requests it receives to better meet challenging demands with limited resources and shrinking budget.

To identify your UCISO, contact 468-COMM or email 78cssxrequirement@robins.af.mil.

accompanied by stars such as Bob Hope, Wynonna Judd, Toby Keith, Vince Gill, Celine Dion and many others.

“It’s been such a whirlwind for so many reasons,” said Tech Sgt. Amy Moran, trumpet player. Her Air Force career will take her to San Antonio, Texas, in mid-July. “When everyone is PCSing, it can get a little crazy.”

Chief Master Sgt. Mark Burditt, band manager, recalled his favorite memories have included being part of the last two Independence Day concerts at McConnell-Talbert Stadium. In particular he said he would always remember the wonderful experience of working with community partners on and off base to ensure a successful show.

“Just the sheer logistics of putting something like that together, I had done things like that in the past … but the scope that they’re doing here is so much greater,” said Burditt, who will soon join the Air Force Academy Band at Peterson Air Force Base, Colo.

“It was a wonderful time putting these shows on. Another piece I really enjoyed was Operation Seasons Greetings just shortly after I arrived here. That was a six-county tour that was a wonderful time to boost the image and brand awareness of AFRC and also reach out and bring a taste of home to military members. That was very rewarding.”

Leaving for his new role as flight commander of the Air Forces in Europe Band later this summer, 1st Lt. Thomas Gamboua remarked that it’s a very bittersweet moment for everyone leaving Robins.

“It’s been a great experience for us to have had all these opportunities to perform,” said Gamboua, band commander and conductor for the past two years. “We’ve all built so many connections here with the city, with the base and especially with the Reserve Command.”

“I think all of us should be able to take these experiences and our expertise and bring them to other Air Force bands as well,” he said. “That’s something we’re all looking forward to.”
