Enlisted, Officers' Clubs change names: Heritage, Horizons

BY KENDAHL JOHNSON
kendahl.johnson@robins.af.mil

The officers' and enlisted clubs at Robins recently received several improvements, including a new menu at the officers' club. But the biggest change made was christening both clubs with new names.

The 78th Services Division began the renaming process in June 2007. That process ended Feb. 1, as officials unveiled new names for the clubs in separate ceremonies. The officers' club received the name Horizons, while the enlisted club is now the Heritage Club.

Colonel Warren Berry, 78th Air

Base Wing commander, helped unveil the new name of the enlisted club.

"While we are naming a building, we are actually honoring you and all Airmen, past and future, who have and who will cross this threshold," Colonel Berry told Airmen at the ceremony. "It is you who have written and continue to write the history that is our proud heritage in the United States Air Force. This is a great day and I am thrilled to be a part of it."

Maj. Gen. Tom Owen, commander of the Warner Robins Air Logistics Center, helped unveil Horizons as the While mission readiness is everyone's personal responsibility, Maj. Curtis Lee, an operations officer in the 78th Logistics Readiness Squadron, said Robins Air Force Base has measures in place to help them get there.

Major Lee, who has been an operations officer in his unit for almost two months, said Robins installation deployment officer, Bill Haffner, who works in the 78th LRS, ensures that people and equipment that are needed for a mission are ready to deploy when called upon.

Unit deployment managers are one resource the IDO uses to ensure Airmen are ready to deploy, Major Lee said.

"Each one of the squadrons on the base has its own unit deployment manager, and every squadron has the responsibility to get its people ready. Whether it's getting people to get their wills or power of attorney, going by the (Airman and Family Readiness Center), (ensuring) the medical readiness, the unit deployment manager is actually the agent for the commander (to get the unit's people ready)."

Major Lee said the 78th LRS sends any necessary guidance for deploying Airmen out through the IDO and UDMs. Guidance is specific to where Airmen deploy.

Often, the 78th LRS will form a processing line to ensure Airmen have the necessary items before heading out.

These processing lines give Airmen a centralized location to tie up loose ends before deploying. Still the responsibility lies with the Airman, Major Lee said.

"Sometimes, people show up and they look down at their folder and it might be the first time they've looked at that information," he said. "It's really incumbent on that member to (be proactive)," he said. "Even if I were to issue someone an A bag and then (he or she) is getting ready to deploy, if you don't pack that stuff in your luggage when you get ready to go, we don't have time to check your bags."

Major Lee said Airmen are responsible for packing what they need for deployment; however, if there are any questions, unit deployment managers can provide answers.

Major Scott Hall, 78th LRS commander, said Airmen need to familiarize themselves with their personal readiness folders.

"I encourage Airmen to go out there and look at their personal readiness folders," he said. "Go see who (your) UDM is and ask (him or her) if there's anything (you) need to get done and if there is, get it done before we have an

2008 force shaping board cancelled

Air Force lieutenants in the 2005 year group, a total of 764 eligible, will not face a fiscal 2008 force shaping board.

"We received enough requests to separate through voluntary separations programs that conducting a force shaping board is no longer needed this year," said Lt. Gen. Richard Newton III, the deputy chief of staff for manpower, personnel and services.

Air Force Personnel Center officials have processed 58 voluntary separation packages for force shaping board eligible officers. Those separations combined with other force reduction programs are expected to meet the Air Force's projected end-strength goal.

All previous restrictions for board eligible officers regarding deployment and temporary duty assignments are lifted.

"We will continue to monitor our end-strength goals to ensure a balanced force and we may elect to use force shaping boards in the future if we need to, but our other programs are meeting our goals for this fiscal year," General Newton said.

The March board would have considered active-duty, line officers in average career fields. Those eligible members may still apply for the limited active duty service commitment or the voluntary separation pay program provided they meet all the provisions in the fiscal 2008 message.

Lieutenants who submitted a separation application but have not received an approved date of separation may withdraw their request for separation.

For those members with an approved separation date who were eligible for the force shaping board, mission justification and wing commander approval are required for application withdrawal. All applications will be reviewed by AFPC officials on a case-by-case basis.

SHOW LOVE FOR LESS

Making Valentine's Day special doesn't have to cost a lot

BY HOLLY L. BIRCHFIELD
holly.birchfield@robins.af.mil

As gas prices soar and the price tag of living escalates, many people may be left thinking they can't afford a special Valentine's Day celebration.

But, some people at Robins have found that spending more time in thought and less money from their wallets can make their loved ones feel special without exhausting finances.

Master Sgt. Brian Poltreis, 402nd Electronics Maintenance Group superintendent, said tight funds in the past have caused him to drum up some creativity to make Valentine's Day special for his wife, Lissa.

"Growing up with two kids in the military, obviously we didn't have a lot of money, especially (when we were) just starting out, so I resorted to not spending a whole lot of money," he said. "I did things that had a little bit more meaning than a Hallmark card. Anybody can go out and buy a Hallmark card for $3 and write their name in it and give it to somebody. I'd rather sit down and hand write a letter, maybe draw a picture on it or something of that sort."

Even though the 42-year-old father of two has planned to take his wife of 18 years to a Bon Jovi concert for a late Valentine's celebration in April this year, he said he still believes in the little things mean a lot approach.

"I like making dinner for my wife, something that she likes, not something that I like," he said. "Something I do throughout the year is write little love notes to her in different languages by using an Internet site called 'Babel Fish.' I can write whatever I want and it translates it to a different language and I give it to her. That way, she has to translate it back."

Jessica Burkett, a logistics management specialist in the 560th Air Combat Sustainment Squadron, said since she and her husband of three years, Senior Airman Ryan Burkett, are saving to buy a house, they're putting more thought into how they spend Feb. 14.

"I think the most meaningful things are things you really thought about and are not your ordinary kind of things," she said. "Take a walk or just sit and talk to each other. Make a special dinner and eat it on the floor with a picnic blanket and candles. Do something to make it more memorable."

The 23-year-old Cincinnati, Ohio, native said her husband's creativity with mapping out a treasure hunt to her Valentine's Day present one year revealed his deep affection for her.

"It was a simple thing," she said. "He didn't spend a lot, but it was something fun and creative so I knew he had thought about it and took a lot of time. That meant a lot."

Sometimes physical distance from a loved one can cause a person to have to stretch their imagination at Valentine's Day.

That has certainly been the case for 2nd Lt. Julia Ma, a communications engineer in the 54th Combat Communications Squadron, whose boyfriend, Calvin, lives in California.

The Ellicott City, Md., native said she and her boyfriend sometimes use a free Internet-based video teleconference program and their webcams to enjoy a movie together.

When schedules permit the couple to be together, Lieutenant Ma said she and her boyfriend tap into her love for art and his love of sports to make their time spent together fun.

Valentine's Day can also be a time to show friends you care.

2nd Lt. Matthew Kahley, a communications and information officer in the 54th CBCS, said having a potluck meal where friends can gather and have a good time is always an enjoyable, inexpensive way to spend the day.

No matter how the holiday is spent, most people agree that it's the thought that counts.

"Anything that comes from the heart and not the store is best," Sergeant Poltreis said.

Mrs. Burkett agreed.

"I think anything that comes from the heart, homemade or not, shows you put in some extra time and love for that person," she said. "It shows you don't take them for granted and you appreciate all that they do."

Operational Readiness Exercise."

Major Hall said points of contact for the items in the folder are ready to help Airmen.

The 78th LRS commander said he thinks Robins could do better in personal mobility readiness.

"We need our Airmen out there to raise their game and take personal responsibility to ensure that their items are good to go," he said.

Master Sgt. Kimberly Charney, Plans and Readiness Section chief for the Services Division in the 78th Mission Support Group, said her people are 100 percent trained and ready for ORI 2008.

The division's 30 plus members have been practicing self-aid and buddy care, putting up tents, and brushing up on a host of training since the August, September 2007 timeframe.

While some new Airmen may be nervous, Sergeant Charney said she's confident her folks are ready.

"We have a lot of new Airmen and they are really enthused and excited about the training because for a lot of them it's their first time ever doing something like this," she said. "They're eager to learn and they've really been doing well."

Sergeant Charney said as the April deadline nears, her team is stepping up to the challenge.

"We're looking to get an outstanding, if not an excellent," she said. "With all of the training that we've been doing, the only thing that I would think could probably get them would be their nerves."

Sergeant Charney said Airmen should stay on top of their information.

"Any time there is a change with your situation, let your UDM know exactly what's going on," she said. "Keep your training up to date. Everyone knows which training is due and when it's due. If it's once-a-year training and it's going to expire in October, you know at least by August, September you need to have that training done again."

Sergeant Charney said Robins knows what it takes to deploy and now is the time to show it.

name of the officers' club. He said the names of the two clubs really complement and support each other.

"Last year the Air Force celebrated its 60th anniversary. The Air Force chose a very appropriate name for that year-long celebration – Heritage to Horizons. We respect that heritage from which we came, and yet look forward to the future, the horizon. So we have chosen fitting names for our two clubs," General Owen said.

In a base-wide contest, Capt. Jason Huffman, 78th Operations Support Squadron, submitted the name 'Heritage Club', while Joyce Roberson, 402nd Maintenance Wing, submitted 'Horizons.' Both won weekend getaways to Atlanta.

"We should all be very proud of our Air Force heritage. It is outstanding to see photographs, art and other memorabilia depicting a unit's heritage proudly on display when walking through a dormitory, squadron or other facility. Through visual depictions of heritage, Airmen are better able to identify with their unit mission and goals and are reminded their sacrifices are not forgotten. The two-way street of mentorship

When I was a young lieutenant, I had no idea what I was getting into when I joined the Air Force.

I was not a military brat, nor had I had any experience with the military other than my college ROTC. I was assigned a sponsor, who did a great job of getting me settled at the base and into my daily routine. After the first six months in, I was comfortable in the job, but not as comfortable with the Air Force.

I wasn't sure what I was supposed to be doing. Should I pursue a master's degree, get my professional engineer rating, or volunteer for deployments?

It felt like everyone else knew what they were doing and what they were to do next. I was uncomfortable and unsure of what I should be doing, so I began to ask questions of the major who was my supervisor. He took pity on the poor lost lieutenant and introduced me to what I now know to be mentorship.

To me, mentorship is a powerful type of relationship. It is more than that of a student/teacher relationship that is more of a one-way relationship where the teacher teaches and the student learns. Mentorship is more of a two-way relationship; a more appropriate example for me comes from the karate dojo.

When I was studying karate in Hawaii, we were required to learn the different levels and relationships in the dojo. The instructor, who in my case was a seventh-degree black belt, is called a sensei. The senior students in the class, normally the brown and lesser black belts, were called sempai. The junior students in the class, all the lower belts from white through green, were called kohei.

As a shodan, I was considered a sempai in the class. Of course, the other sempai in the class were considered to be my peers, much as you would consider the Airmen in similar ranks. The relationship between a sensei and a sempai was more than just that of student/teacher; a sempai is expected to do more than just learn. They have responsibilities to help with the class, to teach the kohei as well as pursuing their own learning. In my case, I spent at least as much time teaching other students their basic katas and positions as I did learning my new ones.

Mentorship is similar to that. It is not just a matter of receiving, it is a matter of giving as well.

Even if you are the chief of staff of the Air Force or the youngest airman basic in the Air Force, you have people around you that are more experienced or less experienced. Mentorship is the responsibility of each and every person to learn from those more experienced than you and to help teach those less experienced than you. Mentorship also implies a special relationship, a personal one that is similar to friendship or that of an older brother/sister to a younger sibling. In the Air Force, we refer to it as the wingman concept.

Having a mentor senior to you is an opportunity.

As a military member interested in your own career, a mentor offers you the opportunity to benefit from someone else's experience. Ask them questions, get their advice and use them as a sounding board for your future plans, whatever you want advice on. And the real beauty of it is, you don't have to have just one mentor. You can have as many as you want. In fact, it can be a real benefit to get the viewpoints of multiple people when you are looking to make an informed decision.

Seek those out who you have respect for, who set an example you identify with, or that are on a path you are interested in traveling down. Engage them in conversation, ask their advice and you are well on your way to cultivating a new mentor.

Being a mentor to those junior to you is a responsibility.

As you progress through your military career, you acquire knowledge. I'm not just talking about the kind of knowledge you get from attending school and training; I'm referring to what my Dad calls the "School of Hard Knocks." A lot of this knowledge is taken for granted. It seems so basic or maybe the importance fades as the years go by. However, to an Airman junior to you, this might be crucial information that can help them make a touch decision or resolve a difficult situation.

As stewards of this information, you have a responsibility to assist your more junior members by allowing them to learn from your experiences, both positive and negative. Find those more junior to you who could benefit from your experiences and offer them the opportunity to learn from them. Not only will you be helping them, but also you will find it personally rewarding as well.

— This commentary was written by Lt. Col. Scott Warner, 386th Expeditionary Civil Engineer Squadron commander.

Servant leadership essential in today's Air Force

Airmen are familiar with one of the Air Force's core values: Service before self. This simple but profound concept has implications — long duty hours, deployments, separation from family, assignments you may not have requested. These sacrifices represent Airmen's willingness to put the needs of the Air Force ahead of their own comfort or benefit. While these events truly require sacrifice at a personal level, there is another aspect of service before self that becomes apparent as you continue to assume more responsibility in the Air Force.

When you move into a leadership role, such as section chief or flight commander, you immediately assume the responsibility for the needs of those in your unit or section, at least in terms of accomplishing your mission.

To put it simply, you have to make sure your followers have what they require to accomplish their mission. This will include everything from proper workspace and equipment to family support programs and morale. To make sure you meet those needs, you, as the leader, have to take the time to think about what those needs are, and then know your people well enough to make sure they get it.

Understanding the difference between needs and wants is important. For a moment, consider a parent caring for a child. A child knows when he is hungry, but may try to meet this need with less than healthy choices. Left to his own device, he might eat only cake, cookies, chips, etc. The parent knows that the child's need is not really just any old food, but nourishment for the long term, which means a healthy and balanced diet. The parent's responsibility is to make sure this need (healthy nourishment) is not neglected in favor of short-term "wants" (good-tasting junk food). In the Air Force, our needs include the technical skills, professional knowledge and education, and the world-class operational equipment we use to succeed, and a superior leader will determine exactly how the organization needs to train to hone its wartime skills to be ready.

So what does all this have to do with service before self? As a leader, you will have to know and focus on the needs of your Airmen, civilians, and unit ahead of your own personal needs.

For many new leaders, this might come as somewhat of a surprise, but the levels of sacrifice will continue to increase as you assume greater responsibilities. Much like the way a parent sacrifices for the good of the child, you will have to spend time not just meeting needs, but thinking about the "bigger picture" to determine what those needs truly are. You may even have to consciously assume the role of the "bad guy" for a time in order to prepare your folks, but in the long term the unit will rise to higher levels of performance and be successful.

Be prepared and willing to make this sacrifice. It may not be intuitive for those who are just beginning their journey into leadership, but the great leaders are the ones who "serve" those whom they lead. Service before self truly means giving all you can to your unit, your subordinates, and your Air Force. While it may be hard in the short term, at the end of the day our people and our country are worth it.

Hands-free cell phone usage

After seeing all of the notices about driving hands free while talking on the cell phone, I am wondering if anybody has been stopped for talking on their cell phone. The reason I ask is, I see on the average of one a day talking on the no hands-free cell phone. I've seen as many as four people talking while driving, on their phones, including a government vehicle. The two best examples I can remember, the last being Thursday morning, was a guy driving in Gate 5 talking on the phone with one hand and giving the guard his ID with his other hand. This was the same guy I had seen a few months ago talking on his cell phone, driving his BMW and having the guard check his ID. Maybe after a few people get hit somebody will finally realize that talking on their hands on or hands free cell phone will still get somebody killed. Thanks for your time.

Colonel Berry's Response:

We appreciate your concern regarding this topic, as we continue to enforce the prohibition of cell phone usage (except for hands-free cell phones) both at our gates and on our roadways at Robins. The 78th Security Forces Squadron issued approximately 20 citations (DD FORM 1408) for the fourth quarter of 2007 and seven already this month for cell phone violations. We have also issued numerous warnings.

78th SFS personnel working at our installation gates constantly advise motorists that using a hands-free device while driving on Robins is mandatory. It's also important to note that suspected violations of this policy are considered a primary offense (reason for traffic stop). Citations will be issued to the operator for violating this policy and three points will be assessed against their base driving record. The points accumulated over a period of time can result in the loss of base driving privileges.

Joint Aeronautical Logistics Commanders conference held at Museum of Aviation

hobby.birchfield@robins.af.mil

Commanders from across the U.S. Armed Forces came together at the Museum of Aviation at Robins for the Joint Aeronautical Logistics Commanders Conference Feb. 5-7. About 30 general officers and SESs from across the Department of Defense attended the conference.

Senior leaders from the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, the Defense Logistics Agency, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Defense Contract Management Agency, and the Federal Aviation Administration reviewed critical aeronautical sustainment issues and discussed joint solutions at the meeting.

Commanders came together at the three-day conference to provide and sustain mission ready aeronautical assets through reduced total cost, reduced cycle time, improved reliability, managed inventories, and reduced burden; increase the percentage of common aviation systems used by each service and agency; and increase uniformity among services and agencies in their interactions with industry.

The group also looked at employee development across agencies, current developments in the area of specialty metals, and serialized item management for unique identification.

Lt. Gen. Jack Hudson, commander of the Aeronautical Systems Center at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, said the conference was held to develop and continuously improve joint processes and procedures that facilitate the design, development, and acquisition of aviation systems as they directly relate to aeronautical logistics.

General Hudson said he expects that the conference will help identify and exploit joint opportunities in aeronautical systems and logistics communities, improve productivity and reduce cost through commonality, and improve and grow working relationships between the military services and federal agencies.

NEW LEGAL ASSISTANCE HOURS

In order to assist its clients more efficiently, the Legal Assistance Customer Service Center, located in Bldg. 708 (across from the hospital), has new hours. Claims assistance, powers-of-attorney, and notaries will be provided during the following days and times:

- Mondays: 8 to 11 a.m.
- Tuesdays: 8 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m.
- Wednesdays: 8 to 11 a.m.
- Thursdays: 8 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m.

Attorney consultations (to include will preparation) are provided by appointment only. To make an appointment, call 926-9276. Due to the high volume of calls, your call may be forwarded to voicemail. In this case, please leave a clear message and you will receive a call back within 24 hours (not to include weekends).

Members who are notified of a deployment and require wills, powers of attorney or other legal services should notify the legal office as soon as possible so we can ensure personnel and resources are available to provide the services you need prior to deployment.

Any questions regarding legal services should be directed to our office at 926-9276.

MPE SECTION CLOSURE

The Military Personnel Element ID Card section will be closed Feb. 22-25 for a mandatory upgrade to the ID Card system. All ID card systems will be down. Please plan accordingly.

All other functions of the MPE will be open for customer support. Emergency ID card replacement functions will be available at the 116th and 622nd Mission Support Flights. If you have any questions, contact Capt. Demetria Johnson at 327-3429, Senior Master Sgt. Ken Ceaser at 327-7337, Capt. Stephen Kidd at 327-7346 or Master Sgt. Tobias Dillard at 327-7340.

The wine tasting is included. Wine or beer by the glass will be an additional cost.

► IN BRIEF

2008 ROBINS CHIEF RECOGNITION CEREMONY AND DINNER

Acquiring the final enlisted stripe is no small feat. Recent statistics indicate that only one of every 100 personnel who begin basic military training in the Air Force will attain the status of Chief Master Sergeant.

This year the Robins Chief's Group will recognize 16 personnel for reaching the pinnacle of their career. The 2007 Chief's Recognition Ceremony and Dinner will be held Feb. 23 at 6 p.m. in the Museum of Aviation, Century of Flight Hangar. Dress for military members is mess dress or semi-formal uniform. Civilian dress is semi-formal. Direct any questions to Chief Master Sgt. Daniel Wright at 327-1652.

The following will be honored.

- CMSgt Glen Barnes, AFRC
- CMSgt Danny Bretthorst, AFRC
- CMSgt David Brooks, AFRC
- CMSgt Sakenna Dixon, 78th CPTS

WAPS TESTING

Due to increased noise levels caused by renovations in Bldg. 905, the testing room no longer complies with requirements as outlined in the AFI. As a result, the 78th Military Personnel Element must relocate all military testing, to include WAPS testing for the current E6/E7 testing cycle. Testing began in the new facility Feb. 1.

The location for testing is now the Professional Development Center, Bldg. 941. The times for testing have not changed and all WAPS testing is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Below are directions to the new testing facility.

Directions from Bldg. 905:
Turn right onto Ninth Street. Go past the Heritage Club to Warner Robins Street. Turn right onto Warner Robins Street. Proceed approximately 50 yards and Bldg 941 is on the right side

When you enter the building, turn left down the hallway and the room is directly in front of you. Directional signs will be posted.

For more information, call 222-0168 or 222-0177.

116TH MSG CHANGE OF COMMAND

Col. Murray A. Hansen, a 19-year Air Force veteran and former director of staff of Headquarters, Georgia Air National Guard, assumed command of the 116th Air Control Wing's 116th Mission Support Group, in a change of command ceremony Feb. 2.

Col. Hansen held the position of Director of Staff for two and a half years during which he was instrumental in providing general officer level headquarters oversight working with two flying wings, six geographically separated units/squadrons and the Combat Readiness Training Center in Savannah, Ga.

Col. Hansen was commissioned through ROTC at Valdosta State College. He began his officer career as a B-52 Navigator at Barksdale AFB, La.

Col. Hansen is married to the former Sharon Fowler of Moultrie, Ga. The couple has three children, three grandchildren and they reside in Warner Robins.

ENGINEERING AND TECHNICAL MANAGEMENT AWARDS

The Engineering and Technical Management awards are presented annually to recognize the outstanding contributions of scientists, engineers and technical teams to the mission of the Warner Robins Air Logistics Center and to aerospace power. This year's awards will be presented at a luncheon Feb. 20, at 11 a.m. in the Heritage Club Ballroom. Col (Ret.) David Nakayama, Center Director of Staff, will be the guest speaker. The theme of the luncheon is "Wise Crack Engineering — Distinguishing Data from Disaster."

The Center has nominated 60 of its best technical people for the awards in 14 categories. Local winners will be submitted to Air Force Materiel Command for competition across the command and the Air Force. AFMC winners will be announced and recognized by senior leadership during a banquet in the spring.

Event tickets are $12 and may be purchased by contacting Urania McCormick at 327-4031 or Angela Pitts at 327-4026 by Monday.

Notice to AFGE Unit Employees Concerning Union Dues

Employees desiring to initiate an authorization for dues withholding may obtain a Standard Form 1187 from any AFGE steward or official. The effective date will be the first full pay period after receipt of the SF 1187 by the Civilian Pay Section.

Employees wishing to discontinue their dues withholding may obtain SF 188s from the Civilian Pay Section or the Labor Relations Office. Discontinuance of dues withholding will be effective as follows:

(1) For an employee who began dues withholding allotments before Jan. 11, 1979: Beginning the first full pay period following Sept. 1 provided the SF 1188 is received by the Civilian Pay Section prior to Sept. 1.

(2) For an employee who started dues withholding on or after Jan. 11, 1979: Beginning the first full pay period following the particular anniversary date (the anniversary date is the starting date of the first pay period for which dues were deducted from the employee's pay).

According to the Labor Relations Office, the Civilian Pay Section referenced above is now the Civilian Payroll Liaison Office. An SF 1188 may be obtained from the Labor Relations Office, Bldg. 255, or the Civilian Payroll Liaison Office, Bldg. 301, East Wing, Bay F. An SF 1188 may be requested either in person or by telephone by calling 926-7781 or 926-6229.

REPRESENTATION RIGHTS

Section 7114, Civil Service Reform Act of 1978, provides certain rights to bargaining unit employees being questioned by management during an investigation. These rights are also spelled out in Article 5, Section 5.03 of the Master Labor Agreement between AFMC and AFGE, Article 16, Section c, of the Nonappropriated Funds Labor Agreement, and Article 7, Section 4, of the Command Labor Agreement between AFMC and IAFF (firefighters).

If a supervisor is questioning an employee and the employee believes discipline may result from the interview, the employee is entitled to be represented by the union if specifically requested by the employee.

The following must all be present for this right to be exercised: the supervisor or management official must be asking questions, the employee must have a reasonable basis to believe discipline could result and the employee must request union representation.

This does not entitle employees to representation when normal day-to-day matters are being discussed or questions are not asked. A counseling session to be entered on the AF Form 971, Supervisor's Employee Brief, and the delivery of a proposed disciplinary action would be two examples of instances when the right does not arise.

If you have a question concerning representation rights under the investigatory interview circumstances, contact your servicing employee relations specialist at 926-3423 or 926-0677 or the Labor Relations Office at 926-7781.

The 78th Logistics Readiness Squadron team puts their muscle into the tug of war competition during Winter Sports Day. The event was one of many which pitted unit against unit.

Winter Sports Day 2008

78th MDG takes overall title

Sports days are special days sponsored by the 78th Services Division Fitness Center open to all units basewide to get exercise, release a little stress and show their spirit in competition with other units.

Since the inception of Sports Days here at Robins in 2003, the 78th Security Forces Squadron has maintained a stranglehold on the top spot, dominating the competition and taking home top honors every year.

This year, the 78th Medical Group challenged the defending champions in a battle that came down to the final event, the relay obstacle course. Security Forces needed a win in that event to capture top honors, but finished third. The Medics placed second, captured first place in three other events, and maximized their participation points in order to win first place and bring home the trophy and end the 78th SFS's string of top finishes.

FINAL SCORE — TOP FIVE

#	Unit	Points
1	78th Medical Group	50
2	78th Security Forces	46
3	330th Aircraft Sustainment Wing	31
4	78th Logistics Readiness Squadron	22
5	78th Comptroller Squadron	19

FRIDAY

ONE MISSED CALL
Shannyn Sossamon, Edward Burn

Beth Raymond is traumatized when she witnesses the gruesome deaths of two friends days apart. She knows that both of them had received chilling cell phone messages-recordings of their own horrifying last moments. The calls were received days before they died, but each death occurred precisely when and how the messages foretold. The police think Beth is delusional-except for Detective Jack Andrews, whose own sister was killed in a freak accident that bears a strange similarity to the deaths of Beth's friends. Together, Jack and Beth work feverishly to unravel the mystery behind the ominous calls. But even as they get closer to the truth, Beth's cell phone begins to ring with an eerie tune, and the readout displays: "One Missed Call." Rated PG-13.

SATURDAY

THE WATER HORSE: LEGEND OF THE DEEP
Emily Watson, Ben Chaplin
Two children discover an egg on a beach in Scotland which eventually hatches into a "waterhorse." Later, that waterhorse grows up to be the Loch Ness monster. Rated PG.

UPCOMING

THE GREAT DEBATERS
Denzel Washington, Forest Whitaker

A brilliant but volatile debate team coach who uses the power of words to shape a group of underdog students from a small African American college in the deep south into a historically elite debate team. Rated PG-13
